Ice and wintry showers for parts of Northern Ireland.

What to expect

- Probably some ice on untreated roads, pavements and cycle paths, leading to an increased risk of injuries and accidents.

Further details

A cold northerly wind will bring a mix of clear spells and showers through Friday and Saturday. As temperatures fall overnight, icy patches are possible, particularly over higher ground and towards southern counties - the ice risk may be increased by showers washing off grit or salt. There is also the chance of seeing hail and sleet in some of the showers, while a few hills may see a slight cover of snow.
